APPEAL LIKELY IN TRACTION COMPANY ASSESSMENT CASE

United States Supreme Court May Be Asked To Give Opinion

ALABAMA COURT ENTERS DECISION

Entire Property of the Company Declared Liable for Amount

The supreme court of the United States probably will be called upon to establish the scope of the liability of the North Alabama Traction company for street improvements, made here years ago, following receipt here of copies of the opinion of the Alabama supreme court, holding the company's entire property is liable, whether within or without the corporate limits of the municipality, to satisfy bonds issued as liens against property of the company abutting the improvements.

The case decided by the Alabama court grew out of litigation over payment of bonds totalling between $2,500 and $3,000 remaining unpaid and which were issued years ago when Le and Ferry streets, Decatur were paid. The bonds were not issued in behalf of the city and the city's credit was not pledged to their payment, it was stated, but they were simply accepted by the contractor as a lien against the property abutting the streets improved.

A number of assessments in the Twin Cities are said to be similar in some degree to the ones now being contested and the case has been watched with a great deal of interest. The bonds involved in the case just decided are held now by the Selma Savings and Trust company.

A constitutional provision was said to be involved in the litigation which will permit the company, if it wishes to take the case to the nation's highest tribunal.

Charles H. Eyster of the company's counsel said today this course likely will be pursued.

JOHN THOMPSON

Characterized by his former West Point classmates as a "man who saw red" and a "heartbreaker," Lieutenant John Thompson has been held for court martial at Manila, Philippine Islands, for the alleged murder of eighteen-year-old Audrey Burleigh. His father, the Rev. Dr. Milton Thompson, pastor of the Russell Sage Memorial Church, Far Rockaway, Long Island, N. Y., arranged for his defense. He shot the girl, step-daughter of another army officer, while returning from a dance.

HOSPITAL CAUSE IS AIDED BY PAGEANT

First Methodist Church Raises Nearly All Of Its Quota

First Methodist church Sunday night subscribed $502.50 toward its quota of $750 for the cause of the Methodist hospital, following presentation of a pageant at the church, entitled "The Good Samaritan." Belief was expressed that when the solicitation committee finishes its work, that the full amount will have been raised.

The pageant was staged under the direction of Mrs. Vera Austelle. The motif was the ministry of healing, developed in an admirable plot which graphically delineated human woe by seven different characters. These were appropriately introduced by the tragedy on the Jericho road with the priest and three Levites passing callously by while the Good Samaritan served the stricken man's needs.

Then followed three persons who represented the various degrees of illness, who were successively met on the stage in front of the hospital by the nurse, and passed to the care of the hospital authorities. But a hitch occurred, because the hospital was full, so a little cripple girl, a woman who had been the victim of an accident and a mother with a sick baby were compelled to wait at the gate of the hospital campus.

This unbearable situation demands a remedy, which was provided by the white robed hosts of the Golden Cross who were led on the stage by a man bearing a large Golden Cross, electrically lighted.

Members of the cast acquitted themselves well and the lesson of the pageant was splendidly given.

LINCOLN OIL LEASE DISCUSSION BARRED IN WHEELER'S TRIAL

Montana Senator Wins Tilt With Opponents at Great Falls

DEFENSE SCORES POINT OF ITS OWN

Beaulieu Deposition Is Read Into Record by Wheeler Counsel

(Associated Press) GREAT FALLS, Mont., April 20—Testimony regarding the oil lease permit granted to L. E. Lincoln, which has been involved in the trial of Senator Burton K. Wheeler in United States court here was barred from the records in a ruling today by Judge Frank S. Deitrich.

The Montana senator is accused of having wrongfully exerted his influence in behalf of Campbell. The government charges that the Lincoln permit was involved in the proceedings.

Judge Deitrich upheld an objection by Senator Thomas J. Walsh, chief counsel for Wheeler, that the Lincoln permit was not one of those pending before the interior department when Senator Wheeler was employed by Gordon Campbell, Montana oil operator.

A stipulation by counsel for both sides was read into the record by R. P. Stewart, special assistant attorney general, one of Wheeler's prosecutors agreeing to accept the testimony of L. V. Beaulieu as he gave it before the senate investigating committee.

Beaulieu once was an attorney for one of Campbell's oil syndicates. He was excused from testifying in person.

The stipulation asserted that if Beaulieu were to testify he would say he received the Phil MacGowan permit assignment from W. W. Rhea and forwarded it to the interior department at Washington. In his testimony before the senate committee he declared he never knew of Wheeler being employed by the oil syndicate to appear before the department of the interior.

CITY ATTORNEYS FILE WATER REPLY

Cities Rest Their Case On The Former Evidence

Attorney G. O. Chenault of the city of Albany and Attorney W. W. Callahan of the city of Decatur have filed their returns on the petition of the Alabama Water company for a rehearing in the fire hydrant case. Attorney Chenault said today that he did not believe there would be any change in the decision of the Public Service Commission.

The cities have filed their final returns and believe that the commission will render the same decision that was handed down at the first hearing if the hearing is granted. No additional testimony has been taken and the case rests on the same evidence that was brought out in the former hearing.

The Alabama Water company is basing a request for a rehearing on the grounds that there is no local income locally to allow the company to give the kind of protection that is needed. Furthermore, that the cities erred in giving them protection for the property in Albany-Decatur.

KIWANIS TO VISIT SOMERVILLE FRIDAY ON "BOOSTER TRIP"

Better Farm Relations Sought by Club With All Communities

RAHM EXPECTS BIGGEST CROWD

Farm Bureau Head To Deliver Address of Welcome

The Farm Relations Committee of the Morgan Kiwanis club accompanied by the greater part of the membership of the club and the Albany-Decatur concert band, will leave on Friday, April 24th for Somerville at 5:45 o'clock where the third of the meetings of the Farm Relations programme will be held at the school building in that neighboring town.

Chairman W. W. Rahm of the farm committee, said today that he was looking forward to the largest meeting that has been held yet when the Kiwanians arrive in Somerville. He declared that the people of that section are deeply interested in a closer and more friendly relationship with these cities and have indicated by their enthusiasm that they will tax the seating capacity of the school building.

The Kiwanians will assemble in front of the Chamber of commerce building and be ready to start on their journey by 5:45 o'clock Friday afternoon. The trip is to be made by way of Hartselle and out the Woodland Mills-Florette roadway. The program that has been arranged by the committee is to be opened at 7:15 o'clock. The address of welcome will be delivered by J. F. Cain of the farm bureau and the response will be given by Reverend James D. Hunter, local Methodist minister.

It is planned that the programme will consist of a number of hand selections, men's choruses accompanied by the band, short talks by the Kiwanians and the citizens of the Somerville section. The programme will last approximately one hour and a half.

This splendid work of the Kiwanis club in the effort to cement the friendly and progressive relationship throughout this and the surrounding counties has drawn favorable comment from Kiwanis International officials who believe that the local programme should be of benefit to every club in the expansion of good fellowship.

CHURCHES HARD HIT BY STORM

Congregations Escape From the Fury of Sunday's Storm

(Associated Press) CHICAGO, April 20—A severe wind and rain storm, approaching the proportions of a tornado in some localities, swept a destructive course from the Mississippi to New England yesterday.

Several persons were killed and in the neighborhood of two score were injured.

New England was deluged with snow and low temperatures were reported at many points.

Scores of buildings were destroyed, or unroofed, trees were felled, boats were beached and telephone, telegraph and power services crippled while fire in some towns completed destruction in the wake of high winds and driving rains.

Churches were marked sufferers, the roofs or steeples of several being carried away while services were in progress within, but without injury to congregations.

Two persons were killed in Peoria, Ill., in the collapse of a building, while a man was electrocuted at Macomb, Ill., when he picked up a live wire, blown down by the storm.

Ten were injured at Wheeling, West Virginia, 15 at Pittsburgh, two at Millbrook, Pa., and a dozen others in scattered towns throughout the storm area.

In Central Illinois, Peoria and Pekin were the hardest hit. In Peoria, where property damage was estimated at $500,000, two night watchmen were killed when a five story brick building crumbled.

WOMAN POISONER'S MIND UNBALANCED

Mrs. Della Sorensen To Be Sent to Asylum, Attorney Says

(Associated Press) ST. PAUL, Neb., April 20—Mrs. Della Sorensen, 28, who yesterday confessed the killing by poison of seven persons, including two of her own children and her husband, probably will never be tried on charges of murder.

Court's attorney, Dobrey, announced that an investigation has shown that Mrs. Sorensen was mentally unbalanced and she would be placed in the state insane asylum.

Should she be released from the institution "within two or three weeks" the murder charges could be revived. The investigation into the series of deaths, extending over seven years which led to Mrs. Sorensen's arrest Saturday and her subsequent confession, was started two weeks ago.

BUS LINE OPENS TO TRI-CITIES

Two Trips To Be Made Daily By Way of Courtland

Two eighteen passenger busses started the daily schedule this morning that is to be observed by the H. and H. bus line between the Tri-Cities and Albany-Decatur. The trip will be made twice daily by way of Courtland, Town Creek, Leighton and Tusculum, with three minute stops in each town along the route.

The service that the H. and H. line proposes is without a doubt the best that has been proposed over this route. Difficult train schedules should make the proposition a paying one to both the company and the people that are to be served. The busses are to leave Florence and Decatur twice daily, at 7 o'clock in the morning and 4 o'clock in the afternoon. A baggage compartment in the rear of each bus has a capacity of 1,000 pounds. Every modern convenience to the public is provided in the bus equipment.

This bus line service has been needed some years between the Tri-Cities and the Twin Cities. The trip will be made in approximately three hours from Florence to Decatur. A faster schedule can be arranged as soon as the connecting link of highway between Town Creek and Courtland and a two mile stretch between Hillsboro and Trinity is repaired. The remainder of the roadway is in good condition, providing about 43 miles of good roadway in the full distance of 51 miles.

ADVICE TO GIRLS

By ANNIE LAURIE

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I am interested in a young man. My mother does not object to my friendship. We have a friendship which is almost too small to contain any one. Mother would be no more than to invite him to my home, since I cannot, I had better ask him to come to my home. BROWN EYES.

OWN EYES: If you feel that your home is not large enough to entertain your friends, my merely refrain from inviting to call on you. But there is reason why you should refuse the visits of your friends.

ANNIE LAURIE: I am a young widow, and been very much interested in a man for over a year. He accepted a position out of the country, and I have several letters, but received none. I know he is not ill or on his duties. I would you advise me to write to him. ALL ALONE.

ALL ALONE: It is not your place, my dear, to write to this man if he has promised you. If he does not answer letters, it is because he is not interested in you, and you not sacrifice your pride to him. Try to forget him.

COMMISSION DENIES ALABAMA REQUEST

Rail Consolidation Case Closed, Evidence Is Finished

(Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, April 20—A request of the Alabama state authorities to the interstate commerce commission that the commission's records on railroad consolidation proposals be re-opened has been denied, after some correspondence between the state representative of the federal body.

It is understood that the state desired to present more evidence than the commission had previously had taken, as to the disposal which might be made of the Mobile and Ohio railroad, in any general consolidation plan.

The commission's representatives concluded that a sufficient amount of testimony as to the Alabama railroad had been gathered in its previous hearing on general consolidation.

property with suave directness. Renshaw slid like a frightened horse, and none of the three pairs of eyes watching him missed the movement. Campbell experienced a sense of revolt, shot through with irritation against his old friend and physician.

"Confound it, how can this fellow be of any use to me, when he's nervous as a cat?" he reflected. "It's going to be an infernal nuisance to have to consider him as if he were a high-strung prima donna."

But, even as the thought went through his mind, the new secretary had recovered his poise and was on his feet, obviously ready for instructions.

"Probably you would like to go up to your room now," Campbell went on, in the suave voice that was so much younger than his years, "to unpack and rest after your journey. Jenks will show you the way. We dine at eight," he added, as the young man followed the butler, who had stopped at the sound of his name.

When the door closed upon the two, Campbell drew a long breath of relief.

"My dear," he fervently ejaculated, "I am beginning to think it will be almost worth while to have that fellow around for the sake of the frequent rapture of getting rid of him."

Verity's black eyebrows rose a trifle. "Why did you engage him, if you don't want him?" she asked.

"Stanley wished him on me. The whole episode is an amazing piece of folly, and I am afraid I don't show up in it any better than Stanley and Renshaw," her grandfather confessed, with growing irritation. He described his interview with Renshaw, while Verity's expression, incredulous at first, changed to one of deepening interest and perplexity.

"You don't imagine there is something back of it?" she slowly suggested. "An effort to get into the house and—"

"No, no!" her grandfather testily interrupted. "The last two years of the man's time are fully accounted for. He has been in sanatoriums, poor chap. Besides, Stanley knows all about him."

"I wonder what happened to him?" Verity spoke almost under her breath, her imagination circling among various dark possibilities of which she had heard and read.

The old man shook his head.

"I haven't an idea. What I want to know is, what's going to happen to me under this absurd arrangement? I can't imagine why I let myself in for it. For a second or two I thought I saw a way of making him useful, but I don't believe it will work out." He broke off. "I suppose the fellow has some magnetism," he ended.

"Not a particle," Verity spoke with conviction. "In fact, it's the other way around. There's something almost repellent in him, something a little—oh, what is the word? Well, something unhuman. He is unusually handsome, of course; there's even a certain nobility about his head and face. And yet, he's like a ghost. Yes, that's what I am trying to get at," she added, with quiet satisfaction. "He looks at us as the dead might look if they came back—as if he had passed through existences and experiences we could never understand and could not even dream of."

"No doubt he has," the old man conceded. "He affects me like a human draft. But we must not let our imaginations run away with us. If he is too depressing, we will get rid of him; I'll ship him off and make him useful somewhere else. He's got to do what I tell him and go where I send him." "And now let's forget the fellow and go on with that book you were reading."

Upstairs, in the chamber to which Campbell had sent him, Renshaw was doing some thinking of his own. His first impression was that it was oddly remote from other rooms. Only one additional door opened from the narrow corridor he had traversed. The second reflection, as Jenks turned a knob and stood back to let him enter his new quarters, was that the room was very large and extremely comfortable. Jenks touched an electric button and the shadowy room flashed into soft light which brought out the details of a mahogany bed in a far corner, facing the door, a high-boy, a low-boy, and a large built-in wardrobe. The room's north wall contained two windows, and through two additional windows, very wide and with built-in cushioned seats, he could look out on the front grounds of Tawno Ker and follow the mapled-lined avenue leading to the highway. He was to have plenty of light and air, he reflected with content.

He went to a north window and, glancing out, found this first impression changing. There would be air, without doubt. But numerous oaks and maples crowded close to the house—so close, indeed, that an athlete such as Renshaw had once been could leap from a window into the wide-spreading branches of at least one venerable tree. The trees were rather unexpectedly thick in front, too, he discovered, and he was surprisingly far from the ground. He would be almost among the tree-tops if he leaned far out of the windows on the front side of his room.

Jenks threw open the door of a second room in which could be seen the line of a shower apparatus and the and porcelain fittings of a bathroom. "The bathroom is very small, sir," Jenks apologized explained, "there's no window in it. It was an accident was that."

figure of Jenks, coming to announce dinner. Campbell and his granddaughter were already in the room the latter before a grand piano, which Renshaw, in his abstraction, had observed during his first visit. The girl had been playing or singing, he assumed, though he had heard no music. Now, seated sideways on the piano-stool, she was absently turning the sheets on the music rack and lending an ear to the monologue of an elderly lady who sat with Campbell before the fireplace. Her resemblance to placed her as the old man's sister, she had entered the world ten twelve years later. Like Verity, she was in full evening dress. She wore a superb diamond and pearl collar; at half a dozen diamond, sapphire and emerald rings relentlessly called attention to the enlarged joints of her fingers. Her white hair was as elaborately waved and puffed as if she were going to a ball. As Renshaw went toward her he heard, the conclusion of her monologue, delivered on a pitched, plaintive key and without a slightest pause:

"Of course you will belittle the matter Davy as you always do but I told you before and I tell you again that your habit of leaving so many tails to the servants will eventually drive us out of house and home as the way they net some of them did get in till after twelve last night though where they could have been more than I know unless James drove them to town in the service car which Verity has expressly forbidden him to do without permission but they never pay any attention to what one orders anyway so what is the use of giving them orders?"

Old David Campbell raised a hand.

"One moment, Kitty," he said good humoredly. "Let me present my secretary, Mr. Renshaw. Renshaw this lady is my sister, Mrs. Pardee, she's got more troubles than any you ever met before. She'll tell all to you, too; you may be sure that."

He chuckled over his own while Renshaw bowed over the table and that lay in his own.

The voice of Jenks placidly repeated the announcement of dinner, and old Campbell offered his arm to sister. Renshaw hesitated. Was expected formally to escort Campbell? Or would she resent an assumption on his part? She was proud as the devil, that girl—line of her and every glance of eyes proved that. Also, she was amazingly lovely. Feeling very unkind of himself, he approached her and mally offered his arm, on which remotely laid a perfect hand. Together they walked the length of the room and, crossing the hall, entered the dining room on its opposite side the living room. It was large and beautiful. There was space in all the rooms of the old house and a beauty of furnishing for the somewhat confused architect of the exterior had not prepared four high-backed and carved French chairs waiting for their occupants at the round table whose tall candles, aided by the freelight, the big room had the illumination.

Renshaw began to feel very much if he were in a corner. In the middle of the room, he had reached Campbell that afternoon he had had to clean out the ground and stood committed to the task he offered, however was, an intimate group, seated at Pardee, and with Campbell opposite feed his eyes. 12 Years Ago From The Daily of TODAY April 20, 1913.
April 20th falling on Sunday there was no issue of the Daily of that date.

There was one feature about the tight trouser leg era that will long be remembered. Mosquitoes had a hard time attacking shanks without being squeezed to death. In this day of enlarged trouser legs mosquitoes should experience little difficulty in successful shin operations.

Birmingham officials declare that dope peddling in their city is a thing of the past. They attribute the successful campaign to the imposing of good stiff penalties in prison sentences. This form of action against the boot-legger should prove just as efficient and everlasting in effect.

Fable: There stands a mighty city. That city was once a little village, its citizenship lived on intense hatreds, opposed every progressive idea, disregarded all laws, contributed nothing toward public improvements, grabbed every dollar without the thought of where the next dollar was coming from, gave no thought to the expansion of agricultural trade and did not care where the tourist routes lead to. Indeed, a fable.

Better take a few minutes spare time and think of the mosquito campaign that was fought last year. Remember that only one case of malaria was reported last year and then decide whether the health unit should be supported in the anti-skeeter campaign or shall the pest be allowed to sink his bill into that region of the neck above the collar line.

From the looks of things at this time Henry Ford will soon be living in a world of his own creation. Ford now has everything that his heart could possibly wish, with the exception of the Muscle Shoals project, and every wheel that turns, turns out a full weight silver dollar in favor of his bank account.

When you are dozing and dreaming over this beautiful spring weather use a thoughtful moment on the ever present fly, the international household pest and constant health dagger. The fly is one danger that the insurance companies have forgotten to list in their long line of accident insurance policies. The filthy fly can cause more illness and death than a full fledged war. Start your activities now. Perfect your aim early and let the summer be characterized by a lack of the dirty pests.

What would you think of the plan of taking each boy at 18 years of age, subjecting him to a psychology test and placing him in a life's work according to the findings in the test? There might be less failures in business and added success in other lines. If the boy has the lines of a criminal, do not wait for him to commit a misdemeanor, put him in jail before he has time to get loose in the world. Think of the great savings to all the cities over the nation if the police departments should be abolished. Do you believe there should ever be an error in the analysis?

Honorable John A. Rogers recently wrote a letter to the bridge leaders of the cities and in substance said, "I knew you would do it," referring to the overwhelming vote on the bond issues of the cities. That is how Mr. Rogers felt even before it was officially known that the bonds had carried and that is how the entire state, possibly the southland, feels since the passage of the issues. Let us ever go forward with sweeping strides as we did with the bond issue elections, our minds and our hearts set upon the upbuilding of these cities, northern Alabama, the entire state and we shall soon find that the whole state is ready to fly to our assistance if the call should come.

TWO LOCAL WOMEN GAIN INTERNATIONAL RECOGNITION
The Daily recently carried a story of the appointment of Mrs. L. A. Neill as a delegate to the quinquennial convention that is to be held later on in the summer months and of the appointment of Miss Margaret Clarkson as a member of the Auxiliary Ways and Means committee for the holding of the Quinquennial Convention of the International Council of Woman's clubs in which forty-five foreign countries are to be represented. Mrs. Neill is representing the state of Alabama as a delegate at this convention.
This national recognition has come to these two prominent women through their efforts and work in the past years. Mrs. Neill and Miss Clarkson have always been identified in the more prominent civic and musical circles of the state and the honor that they have been accorded is an honor that is granted for merit and ability.
These cities are indeed grateful that they have been so fortunate in winning these honors and point to the selection as a reward of worthwhile service and ability to do.

setup week starts with April 27th. There is no reason why Albany-Decatur should not start the summer season right with a spic and span clean shirt. The wife is just about through her spring cleaning, now let's all get out and make the grounds around our little homes, the garden spot of the universe.

Oh, I've traveled from coast to coast. I left paper trays and napkins all over Maine. I threw tin cans clear across Texas. I ignored all the speed laws of the state of Washington. After I shook with fear as I crossed the Tennessee River by ferry at Albany-Decatur, I left empty bottles and lunch boxes all through the state, it was easy to follow me to Florida or to the Gulf. I litter up every state in the union the whole year round. I am the American tourist.

ROBBING THE WOODS OF THEIR BEAUTY

It is seriously doubted whether the timely and worthwhile movements conducted by the newspapers every year to save the flowering trees and shrubs along the roadsides from the despoilers ever result in any tangible good in conserving these ornaments of the great outdoors. The dogwood and the wild plum which add so much to the beauty of the woods seem to be the special prey of these thoughtless people and these trees are often disfigured the rest of their life. It is difficult to save these blossoms that are the glory of the woodlands from motoring parties and picnickers. They are an ever-present temptation to Sunday visitors along the country roads. On these afternoons going along all the principal highways there is an endless stream of automobile parties ready to despoil the woods of their loveliness. When the boughs are broken to take home, the trees suffer badly. Hence the opportuneness of these regular appeals to spare the flowering trees.

An energetic campaign to save the dogwood was conducted in Washington last spring with gratifying results. Posters showing a girl with an armful of dogwood, with two stripped trees in the background and the words "Please leave the dogwood for the others to enjoy," were displayed on the front of the street cars for a week and placed in all the schools and most of the government buildings. The newspapers and theaters also helped. The vernal beauty of the country roads was in this way to some extent preserved.—Selma Times-Journal.

SENATOR ROGERS COMES IN FOR HIS SHARE OF LEGISLATIVE WRATH

Senator John A. Rogers, chairman of the state highway department, is now coming in for his share of the wrath of the legislative department of the state. Senator Rogers has been gradually moving toward the realization of his dream of a bond issue of $75,000,000, for the building and the maintenance of roads in the state and the legislators are believed to have become very highly incensed over an invitation that Mr. Rogers has issued to them to attend a banquet in Montgomery in the earlier part of May. The chairman of the highway commission declares that he wishes them to meet with him so that the highway problems of the state may be discussed. He wants their advice on the subject of road building, bond issues, and other matters of relative importance to the good roads program of the state.

Some of the legislators, on the other hand, desire to "shun those things that have the appearance of evil." They won't even accept his invitation to enter the parley. They are up in arms because some one has invited them to a banquet to exchange views and outline plans for the construction of greater highways, trunk lines over the state. It seems they have been provided with ears but they do not care to hear.

A representative of the Jefferson county district has said that "he has found very few in favor of submitting the $75,000,000 bond issue to the people, until the highway commission shapes a definite program and does something in the way of intelligent road building." Of course that is the opinion of one man and he has a right to it. We believe that Senator Rogers would have been happy to have him at the banquet table for the roads discussion, or he wouldn't have extended the invitation, but regardless of the strength of this man the banquet, most likely, will be served and the roads parley will be held.

Mr. Rogers has probably made mistakes in the building of the highways in the state in that a greater number of them have not been of permanent character. The cost of the upkeep will no doubt be tremendous in the future and the people of the state will have a great burden to carry in taxation, but there is one thing about Mr. Rogers that cannot be denied; he has practically placed a bridge across the Tennessee River, the connecting link of two great states, the missing link in a great highway system that runs all through the south. He has done that much and North Alabamians surely do not doubt his sincerity in that matter. We can but stop for a moment to consider the action that the highway department has taken. They accomplished in a very short time what companies, corporations, and cities with the support of the people of these communities, failed to do in the efforts twenty-five long years. Then is it not worth-while at least to listen to the plan of the highway commission? Mr. Rogers' dream of the bond issue may not be practicable at this time, but there is certainly little ground to stand upon in opposition if the legislators do not take the time to consider it and hear the program that is embodied.

No, we do not favor the passage of this bond issue either, not until the state has shaped a definite program for the building of permanent roads, but we are certainly not going to assume a "Hear No Evil—See No Evil" attitude until we know just what the plan carries.

Senator Rogers should be given a hearing on this subject of so great importance. Probably his point of view might help the legislators in straightening the road muddle. Their views in turn might serve the highway chairman to an advantageous end. Nothing has ever been accomplished when two forces attempting the same project, have stood off and dared the other to take a step. We do not believe that Senator Rogers has adopted such a policy, his invitations to the legislators would certainly indicate that he wishes to get the very best thought from the state's lawmakers. He surely can gain little aid from them if they will not open their mouths except in criticism.

We are not attempting to fight a battle for Mr. Rogers and we are not taking up the quarrel for the legislators of the state, we are merely asking that if the get-together method is the best for the future of the state, if views can be given on both sides of the argument, for and against the bond issue, if better means can be reached for clearing up one of our greatest problems, that of road building, then for heaven's sake get together, put your heads together for your own people and yourselves and avoid giving the people of the state your one-sided views. Give them the facts in the case, that is all that we ask. Then they can decide what amount is to be appropriated for the good roads program, for it is the people after all who must provide the funds for the building; it is the pocket of the whole people that must be turned wrong side out and it is the people who are to benefit with the advent of good and permanent roadways.

Voice of People

Dear Sirs:—
This is to remind you that the street in front of the Decatur high school has been re-christened. It is Wilson avenue. To call it Pond street is an antiquated and out of date as to call New York City by the name of New Amsterdam or Huntsville by the name of Twickenham.
Please make out your bills accordingly. We like our new name, besides, it is our legal name, and your bills are null and void unless you make them out correctly. Great corporations have gone into bankruptcy on account of misnomers.
I think the residents along Wilson avenue join the students and teachers of the high school in wishing to have the new name generally adopted.
Yours for progress,
W. W. BENSON

Rebels Reported Have Taken City

(Associated Press)
MANAGUA, Nicaragua, April 20—It is reported that Honduran revolutionists have captured Ocotepic, Honduras, a village 50 miles from San Salvador and are marching toward Comayagua, which is 35 miles northwest of the capital, where the situation is reported as critical.

Reports from Honduras, through Managua, said April 14 that General Ferrera, with 300 followers, had started a revolutionary movement as a result of which the government declared martial law.

TELEPHONING

MADE PLEASANTER
STOCKHOLM—The "line's busy" nuisance in telephoning has been mitigated in this city through the installation of an ingenious arrangement called the "waiting line." It will apply the "first come first served" rule to places much in demand such as hospitals, drug stores, doctors' offices, ticket agencies, information bureaus and newspapers. This is done by the creation of a special central and whenever a number is reported "busy" by the operator or the automatic switching machine, the "waiting line" is called and the desired number duly recorded in the sequence of its receipt. Then, as soon as the line is clear, the connection is made.

YOUR HEALTH
Efficiency Is Impaired by Neglect of Body Ills

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.,
United States Senator from New York,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

A COUNTRY secure in its peace and prosperous in its economic affairs gives little attention to government and the conduct of its public offices.

A man who has health, appetite, happiness and a sense of well-being gives no thought to his body. He takes life as it comes and thinks naught of the morrow.

I wouldn't think much of a nation or an individual taking no heed of what neglect may do. A careless nation will be aroused some day by maladministration, which is sure to take place in some department. Unfortunately, the neglect of physical oversight is likely to be followed by serious impairment of some organs or of the general health. Eternal vigilance is the price of health quite as much as it is of national liberty.

I should become a pest. I am sure, were I to take to task the many persons I come in contact with who are violating Nature's rules. It wouldn't matter if such violations meant nothing more than headaches or colic. But, alas, they mean lessened efficiency and shortened life.

One day recently I was having a dish of crackers and milk with apple sauce in a side room in the Capitol. A figure kept passing the window, and after a while I observed that it was one of my colleagues, who was racing up and down the terrace, giving himself some fresh air and exercise. He was in an overcoat and with hat pulled down over his face, kept out the biting wind of a belated Spring, but in spite of all he was drinking in volumes of pure air.

Passing me on his way back into the building he exclaimed against the vile air of the interior. In this case hundreds of men, cooped up for a whole day in exhausted and contaminated atmosphere.

Office men and women, housewives, barbers, manicurists, storekeepers—everybody should know the importance of fresh air and exercise in the fresh air. If you would live long you must serve the rules. An extra strong body may resist all manner of abuse, but immunity won't last. Some day you must pay the piper.

I don't want to worry you or to bring gloom into your happiness. But I do beg of you to give five minutes' thought now and then to the needs of your precious body.

Answers to Health Questions

A.—Try rubbing a good hair tonic into the scalp after shampooing. For further particulars send stamped, self-addressed envelope and repeat your question.

MRS. S. H. Q.—I had a stroke in October and still feel the effects in my right side—in the arm and leg. I also have dizzy spells. What would you advise?

A DAILY READER. Q.—What would you advise for painful, swollen joints? Also for tracking joints?
A.—This is probably due to an incorrect diet. You should eat the simplest kinds of food, avoiding tea and coffee. For further particulars kindly send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

R. D. Q.—What causes gas in the stomach and how can I relieve it?
A.—This is probably due to an incorrect diet. You should eat the simplest kinds of food, avoiding tea and coffee. For further particulars kindly send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

ONE WAY IN WHICH BRITISH PARLIAMENT WASTES TIME

LONDON—Members of the British parliament who have telephones in their homes were somewhat startled recently when they ascertained, that because of the instruments, they might be deprived of their seat in the house. They are asking whether they have committed a breach of the famous act of George the Third's parliament, which says that any person undertaking a contract with a government departure shall not be entitled to sit in the house. The telephones here are owned and operated by the government.

The question was brought to light by Captain T. J. O'Connor, himself a member of parliament and having a telephone in his office, who announced that he would ask the attorney general if he proposed to introduce legislation to safeguard members who have contracts with the postmaster-general for the installation of telephone services.

BRITISH WOMEN'S CLUBS, PURELY SOCIAL IN NATURE, PROVE FAILURES

LONDON—Clubs for women are not a success in London, at least those merely for social inter-course, and several have gone into bankruptcy while others saved themselves by the process of amalgamation.

Something more than social amenities are required to keep a club together, and this is exemplified by the flourishing condition of the Ladies' Carlton Club, which has an important political atmosphere and is in close touch with the Unionist central office. Another, the Agrarians Club, is thriving because of its specially interesting lectures by prominent people in the gardening world, its regular garden dinners and well equipped garden library.

Tip For Beginners.

Solve this puzzle by comparing the synonym listed in the "Horizontal" and "Vertical" columns with the number of spaces extending crosswise or downward on the diagram, as the case may be. If a word occurs to you meaning substantially the same as the synonym and the correct number of letters to fit in the spaces between its number and the first shaded stop following, write it in lightly. Work away the small words, the "easy" words, first, and they will give you plenty of clues to the difficult ones.

Barons and Lookouts Have Bad Week; Pittsburg Getting Bumps Real Early

The Baronial hosts of Johnny Dobbs and the Lookouts over Chattanooga way finished the last week as the poorest in the Dixie circuit. Each team fell below all pre-season expectations winning one game and losing four.

The Nashville Volunteers have been clouting every Baron boxman who dared face the front, regardless of all the steam and curves that had been hoarded and stored during the winter fireside season. Bennett, Crowder, Hall and all the rest came in for a share of punching. The Vols erased every Baron attempt with the exception of one hard hitting spree in which the Barons actually clouted their way to the front.

The Chattanooga enrant has been facing one of the heaviest hitting teams in the southern circuit. This club likewise has some of the best hurling artillery limbered up in the sunland district. Atlanta has lost but one game to the Lookouts and like the Baronial attack it was won by virtue of the heaviest stick attack. Chattanooga and the Barons seem to be in very bad shape so far as the hurling talents are concerned.

Pittsburgh, heralded as one of the foremost teams in the National has been turned back all week by the Chicago Cubs and the Cincinnati Reds. Yesterday Emil Yde, the sensation of 1924 was turned back to defeat for his second time since the season opened. Adolph Luque bested Emil in Cincinnati after a six-inning scoreless battle. The Reds hopped on Yde in the seventh and eighth and let up only after six runs had been tallied.

Barney Dreyfuss and Bill McKetchnie, of the Pirate advisory council, said before the season was opened that they had the fastest team in organized baseball, but it seems that they have their horses headed on the wrong path. They are certainly racing towards the end of the course rather than towards the front.

Moulton News

I T. Quinn, commissioner of department of conservation, spent Thursday and Friday with B. M. Lufburrow, supervisor of the Alabama National forest in looking over the reservation with the view of stocking it with wild life especially deer. He expressed himself as well pleased with the outlook and said that there is good reason to think that several deer may soon be procured for the beginning a large herd. Mr. Quinn made an interesting talk to a number of citizens Friday evening in Moulton outlining the purposes of the department and its desire for co-operation with the Forest Reservation management. Co-operatively it is planned to establish two sanctuaries of five thousand acres each in the forest where all wild life will be free to roam unmolested. Already there are many wild turkeys in the forest. Elaborate plans are being worked now looking to the establishment of tourist camps for use as soon as the roads to the forest are completed. Already the mountain roads are well graded and smooth. Mr. Quinn defined conservation as the protection of resources for the use of man. Mr. Ted Connelly, state game warden was with Mr. Quinn on the trip through the forest.

The Lawrence County board of revenue resumes its work Monday of examination and adjustment of the county tax assessments. Three days of the past week were spent in examination of the assessor's books.

News reached Moulton last week of the death of Mrs. Clara Stewart at Hanford, California. Mrs. Stewart was until three years ago a resident of Moulton for many years; she was honored and loved by the whole town for nobility of character and good deeds.

Glenn Grisham, civil engineer in charge of the Valley Road from Moulton to the north near Courtland, has moved his family to Moulton from Blount County and entered fully upon his duties. The grading of the road is progressing rapidly.

State-examination for teachers who took the Reading Circle work during the winter was held at Moulton Saturday.
